ACT TWO

SCENE 1

MATURE MALE ENSEMBLE SIDE*INITIAL SELF TAPE

[MUSIC NO. 15 — ENTR'ACTE]

The Inkpot.

AT RISE: [MUSIC NO. 15A — OPENING ACT II]

Sitting in the booth, having a beer and sketching on his pad, is
SAM.

START

SAM. Maury—! (MAURY joins him.)

MAURY. Yeah, Sam?

SAM. Where the hell did everybody go? I've never seen the joint so empty.

MAURY. They're in the kitchen. Herb Gardner's trying to recreate Al Capp's recipe for Mammy Yokum's Kickapoo Chicken. (sees the sketch pad) Okay if I look?

SAM. Help yourself.

MAURY. (picks it up and studies it) Everything's here except the first panel.

SAM. I haven't got that far yet. (as MAURY looks puzzled) I always do the strip backwards, Maury, didn't you know that?

MAURY. No.

SAM. Yeah. I start with the fourth panel and work my way back. In the first panel Katz will be in the saloon, talking to his buddies, and they ask him how his marriage is going.

MAURY. (reading) Okay, so Katz says, "Before the wedding everybody told me that in today's modern world it's much easier to live together than to get married. But in my case, the marriage part was a breeze—it's the living together that's so damn hard."

SAM. So what else is new?

MAURY. Not goin' so good, huh, Sam?

SAM. No, Maury, not so good. The funny part is now that I'm living alone again it's not so different from being married to Tess. But I had to move out—I couldn't take it any more. It was like being married to "60 Minutes" and "That's Incredible," all rolled into one.

MAURY. What'd you expect? She's famous. I heard that after the President's wife, she's the number two dame in the country. She must know practically everybody in the world. END
